Developing Fundamental Skills on Leadership for Vietnamese Managers

Posted: Thursday, March 20, 2008

To enhance Vietnamese enterprises' performance in the integration process, Vietnam Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the Australian National University (ANU) jointly organize the Leadership Skill Development course. The course aims to increase understanding and develop fundamental skills on leadership for Vietnamese managers. The program will use both cognitive and behavior approaches, by providing up-to-date knowledge on leadership and building personal, interpersonal and group skills. On mastering the competencies, participants will be able to apply their knowledge and skills in the areas of business administration and management. By the end of the course, participants will understand the needs and importance of leadership; distinguish the differences between management and leadership and choose an appropriate approach to different situations; develop/draft a vision statement for your organization; understand main components of Emotional Intelligence and Leadership style; and their implications to practical work-place context; choose and apply an appropriate leadership style into a real situation.

The course is ideal for people, who are currently providing leadership at team and organization levels; potentially considered in the organization's plan of leadership development; or, interested in learning about leadership and management.

Participants, who attend all sessions, complete all assignments and pass the final assignment will be awarded a Certificate of Completion from the Australian National University.

Participants, who only attend the classes, will receive a Certificate of Attendance issued by VCCI and GDLN Asia Pacific.
